This month's equity book giveaway is Learning to Teach Everyone's Children by Dr. Carl Grant and Dr. Maureen Gillette.

A review of the book states that the authors have “created a unique framework, combining the dual themes of Power and Education that is Multicultural and Social Reconstructionist. These themes provide an illuminating lens to learn about the policies, practices, knowledge, and skills of becoming a teacher. The text focuses on the educational system as a power-laden institution. It takes the position that power and issues of ethnicity, gender, social class, ability, language, and sexual orientation influence educational opportunities and responsibilities for teachers and students, administrators, parents, and members of the wider community.”

The book challenges educators to try to make education better for ALL students.
